Call for Paper Submission

The 2nd International Symposium on Liberal Arts and General Education (K-ISLG)

We are pleased to announce the second International Symposium on Liberal Arts and General Education sponsored by Kyoto University will be held on November 23 at Kyoto University Clock Tower Centennial Hall. Following the great success of the first symposium in March, 2011, we are expecting further variety of submissions from undergraduates (especially junior and sophomore students) at Kyoto University.

The objective of this symposium is to demonstrate the accomplishment of the first-year experience of “liberal arts and general education” at Kyoto University, and to foster people to take internationally active roles in the future.

The research papers on any topic of your current interests are welcome, from areas like politics, ecology, international relations, economics, education, biology, and others. You may present all kinds of your accomplishments including scientific thinking learned through the first-year experience.

This symposium is open to students currently belonging to the undergraduate courses in Kyoto University. The papers have the following requirements:

- Originality Each paper must be the author’s own work, or collaboration with other students.
- Authors All undergraduates at Kyoto University are eligible.

The submitted papers will be reviewed and about 10 papers are to be presented in the symposium on November 23. Some of the most excellent papers will be awarded by the President of Kyoto University, the committee, and other co-sponsors.

Seminars aiming at learning about research skills, academic writing and presentation in English are planned during the summer vacation.
